Three Good Games Usher in the Baseball Season in the Copper Country--Local Teams Winners

The baseball season of 1914 was ushered in at three very interesting contests played Saturday afternoon by teams in the Calumet and Hecla leagues. The satisfaction of the fans in Calumet and the north end district over the opening of the season was increased when the three teams representing this district won their respective contests, Calumet defeating the Lakes at the Athletic park; Hecla winning from Hubbell at Hubbell and the Almoech team taking the measure of the Portage outfit on the Hurontown diamond. The large crowds in attendance at these games indicated that the season is to be a very auspicious one.

expecting 100,000 to attend race at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 18.—The largest crowd that ever assembled within a paid enclosure to witness a sporting event is predicted for the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, over 100,000 being the estimated attendance. Special trains and Pullmans are booked from all parts of the United States, smaller delegations hailing from as far away as London and Paris. Several cities, such as Detroit and Chicago, will send four and five trainloads themselves.

Special arrangements, naturally, are under way for the accommodation of visitors. All those failing to make hotel arrangements, which, incidentally, are much more ample this year than ever before, will be taken care of through room bureaus conducted by the speedway management and Indianapolis newspapers.

READY TO PLAY FOR GOLF TITLE

America Well Represented in Britain But Others Are Strong

New York, May 17.—The fourth and most important to date of the many international sports competitions in which the experts of the United States and England meet this year will begin tomorrow with the playing of the English Amateur Golf championship tournament over the course of the Royal St. George's Golf club at Sandwich. For this golf classic of the old world America has made the most representative entry in its history and the spirit of seeking new fields to conquer is most commendable since there was no organized effort in this direction, each of the dozen or so American entrants competing as individuals.

England leads at the present time in the general international sports series of 1914, having scored with the Oxford University relay team at Philadelphia on April 25 and again in London on May 6, when E. M. Baertlein defeated Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, in the final round of the English amateur country tennis championship. Against these two victories America has but one, that in which Jay Gould defeated George P. Coeys of London, at Philadelphia in March for the world's open court tennis championship.

Of the Royal St. George's club courts it need only be stated that it is considered one of the hardest to negotiate in low figures in all England. Bunkers, hazards, sand pits and rough are scattered with lavish hand throughout the course. The lay of the holes is such that great care and control is necessary in playing almost every stroke. The slightest deviation or overplay at certain holes results in trouble in pits or hazards which will easily double par figures before the green is reached. To win the English title over this course and from the field of entrants, that tee off tomorrow is a task to test the golfing ability of the world's best players.
